Createspace, United States, 2015. Paperback. Book Condition: New. 216 x 140 mm. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand .The author is a 74-year-old retiree who can see the 10th hole of a Venice, Florida golf course from his dining room window. About two years ago he began playing regularly and hoped his game would improve quickly. When that didn't happen, he began writing about the daily comedies and triumphs of his golfing adventures primarily because he thought that might help his game. In July 2013, The Venice Gondolier Sun began running Seiden's stories as a column entitled Golf s Old Magic. The 25 stories in this book chronicle two years in the life of this Golfer-Writer-Retiree. One of Seiden's stories was the first-place winner for Sports Columns in the Florida Press Association 2013 Better Weekly Newspaper contest. In the words of the editor of The Venice Gondolier Sun, Ronald Dupont, Jr.: Mark Seiden, like many great sports columnists, is able to find the human element of the sport he is covering. He finds great people fighting to be even greater while also highlighting those whose struggles make the act of simply getting on to a golf course quite the triumph. He has caused our readers to laugh and cry while better appreciating a sport so often taken for granted even in Florida. In the writer's own words: I love the physicality, aliveness, and sense of challenge I feel out on the big green expanses of golf courses. It's a joy that has drawn me out there day after day. I've met great people through golf. We spend a lot of time together when we play. We see each other in moments of grandeur and weakness. We learn to empathize because...
