RareBooksClub. Paperback. Book Condition: New. This item is printed on demand. Paperback. 90 pages. Original publisher: Washington, DC: Office of Worker and Community Transition, U. S. Dept. of Energy, 1999. OCLC Number: (OCoLC)43451040 Subject: Labor market -- United States -- Planning -- Congresses. Excerpt: . . . Seventh National Stakeholder Workshop Summary Report for workers facing the loss of DOE employment. In contrast, EMs leasing objectives include the facilitation of the ultimate disposition of the facility or site, the reduction of operating costs and overhead, and the reduction of cleanup costs. It should be noted that unlike the Office, EM does not spend funds on or sponsor the Departments economic development program; EM is legally prohibited from spending funds on this program. EM is able to accommodate leasing if these efforts lead to disposition, reduce cleanup costs, reduce operating costs and overhead or do not interfere with cleanup. Due to this difference in leasing process objectives between EM and the Office, Mr. Tracy explained that it is necessary for the Department to resolve these differences efficiently. Policy issues should be resolved at Headquarters, while accommodations and interpretations should be implemented in the Field. Mr. Tracy stated that DOE also engages in Leasing Implementation Reviews. The Field conducts reviews at both Area Offices and Field Offices. Headquarters Program and Oversight also conduct reviews in order to make sure that all objectives are successfully met. EM has identified several issues inherent to the leasing process. These issues include: financial accounting for site services; environmental compliance, including both oversight and permit holding liabilities; safety of operations, which includes impact of tenant operations, impact of DOE operations on tenants, regulatory oversight, and training of employees; and, security, including access control and protection of equipment and classified information; facility baseline assessments; and emergency planning. Mr....
